Re: Honeywell International Inc., et al. v. Apple Computer, Inc., et al.,
C.A. No. 04-1338-KAJ

Dear Judge Jordan:

On behalf of Defendant Arima Display, I am writing in response to the Honeywell Plaintiffs' letter of September 7, 2006. In that letter, Honeywell states that, except for defendants Epson, Hitachi, BOE-Hydis, Wintek and Toppoly, the defendants "have made absolutely no commitments to produce documents." Honeywell also complains of various other alleged deficiencies in defendants' responses to discovery. To the extent that Honeywell intended to imply that Arima Display has failed to participate in discovery, Honeywell's statements should be clarified. By Stipulation and Orders entered March 1, 2006, and August 11, 2006, Arima Display's responses to Honeywell's discovery requests are not due until the first week of October. As such, the discovery issues that Honeywell has raised in its letter and any order entered by this Court relating to those issues should not apply to Arima Display.

Respectfully,

William J. Wade
